Oxyrhyncus Papyri 1786 (late 200's)

The earliest non-Biblical Christian hymn

“Let it be silent; Let the luminous star not shine; Let the winds (?) and all the noisy rivers die down’ And as we hymn the Father , the Son and the Holy Spirit, let all the powers add, ‘Amen Amen’. Empire, praise always, and glory to God, the sole giver of good things, Amen Amen.

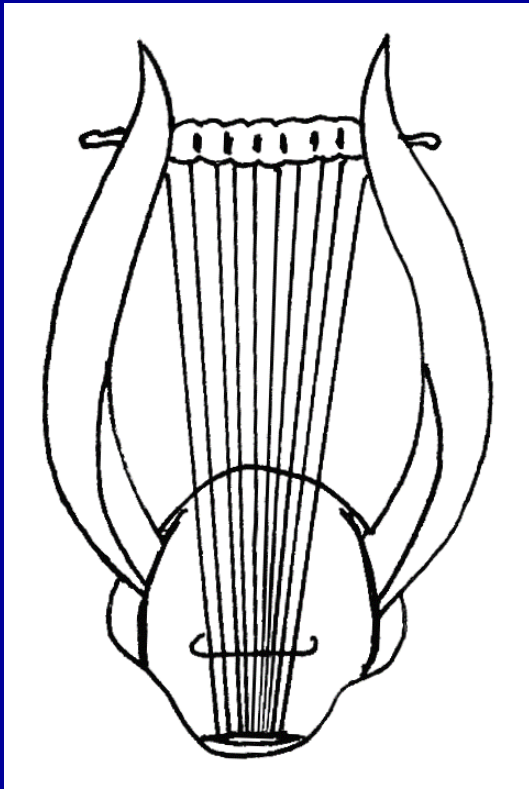

Early Church writings on Music

Ignatius of Antioch:

Your church “harmonizes with the bishop as completely as the strings with a harp”

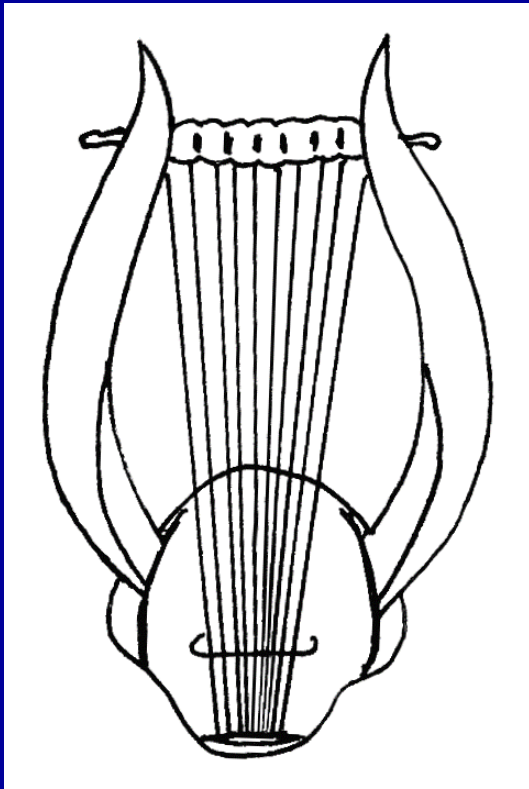

Early Church writings on Music

Ignatius of Antioch:

“by your unity taking your key note from God, you may with one voice through Jesus Christ sing a song to the Father.”

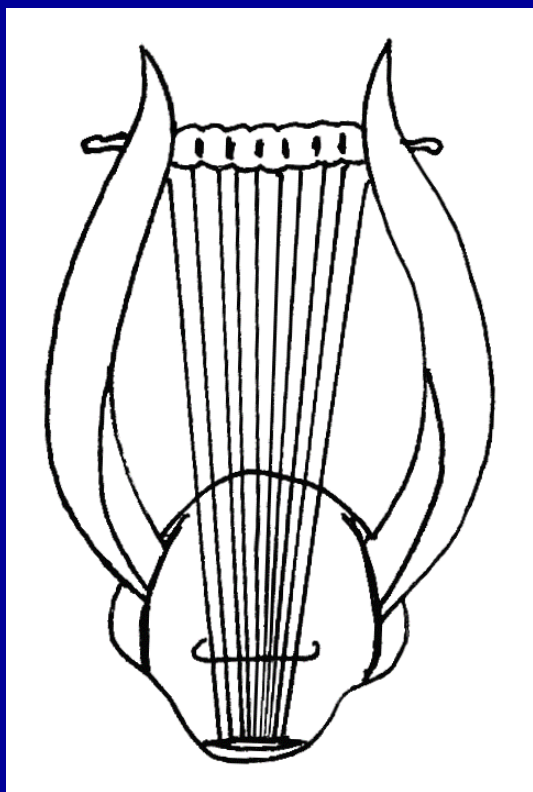

Early Church writings on Music

Clement of Alexandria:

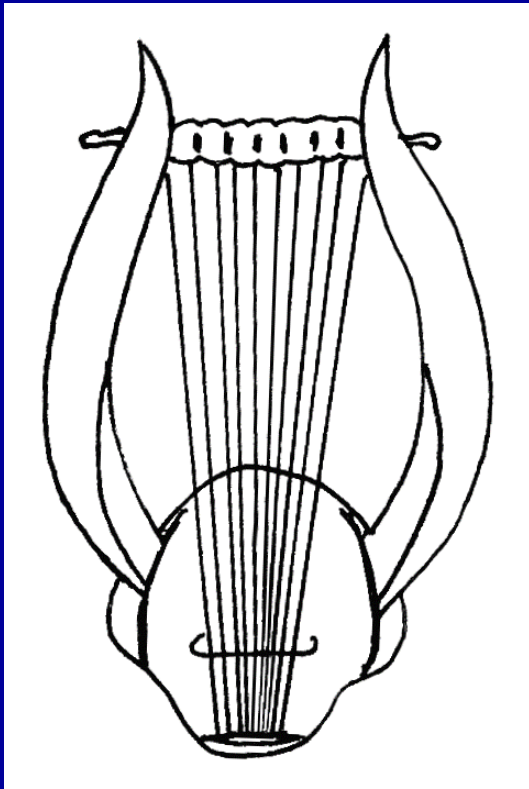

“Plucking strings ...
Godless.” The sound of the aulos [flute] was “erotic” leading to “dancing, drunkenness
and every sort of trash”
